Suspected bombs target top Democrats two weeks before U.S. election

WASHINGTON/NEW YORK (Reuters) - Police intercepted suspected bombs mailed to former U.S. President Barack Obama, former presidential candidate Hillary Clinton and other high-profile Democrats in what New York officials described on Wednesday as an act of terrorism.

With the country deeply polarized, the packages brought a new level of tension to Nov. 6 political contests that will decide whether Democrats can challenge the majorities now held by President Donald Trump's Republicans in Congress.

The CNN bureau in New York also received a device looking like a pipe bomb, leading police to evacuate the building in a busy part of New York City near Central Park.

Eric Holder, who was U.S. attorney general under Obama, and Democratic Representative Maxine Waters were also among those targeted.

The mailed devices had the appearance of pipe bombs, though experts said there was no indication the improvised devices could be detonated remotely.

A similar-looking explosive device was delivered earlier this week to the home of George Soros, a prominent Democratic Party donor. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

"This clearly is an act of terror attempting to undermine our free press and leaders of this country through acts of violence," New York Mayor Bill de Blasio told a news conference.

Trump condemned what he called "despicable acts" and vowed to bring those responsible to justice.

Trump, who usually relishes in making partisan attacks on Democrats, also issued a rare call for unity.

"In these times, we have to unify, we have to come together, and send one very clear, strong, unmistakable message that acts or threats of political violence of any kind have no place in the United States of America," Trump said at the White House.

"We're extremely angry, upset and unhappy about what we witnessed this morning, and we will get to the bottom of it," Trump said.

All of the targets are frequently disparaged by right-wing critics.

Soros is a frequent target of anti-Semitic conspiracy theories, some voiced openly by Trump supporters, that he is part of a secretive effort by elites to control the world.

Alexander Soros, the son of George Soros, said in an opinion piece published by The New York Times that his father had long faced threats over his involvement in politics, "but something changed in 2016" when Trump was elected.

"Before that, the vitriol he faced was largely confined to the extremist fringes, among white supremacists and nationalists who sought to undermine the very foundations of democracy. But with Donald Trump's presidential campaign, things got worse,"

Houston Airport System translates essential parts of website into Chinese

The Houston Airport System has added a third language to its website: Chinese. Those traveling to Bush Intercontinental and Hobby airports will now be able to access a scaled-down version of Fly2Houston.com in Chinese, getting translated information for terminal maps, restaurants, immigration procedures, ground transportation and more. "We were looking at all the languages in our airport, and we saw the No. 3 one was Chinese," said Kathleen Boyd, chief marketing officer for the Houston Airport System. "So it's an important market for us, and it's a growing market." The website was fully translated into Spanish, the second most spoken language, earlier this year. She said analytics from those who have Chinese set as their preferred language when visiting the Airport System website helped determine which pages to translate. The Chinese microsite for Hobby Airport can be accessed at fly2houston.com/hou/chinese and the microsite for Bush Intercontinental Airport at fly2houston.com/iah/chinese.

The inaugural flight of Air China arrives at Bush Intercontinental Airport in 2013. The Houston airport's website now has portions translated into Chinese.

Austin beats Houston in latest 'best food cities' ranking

By Fernando Ramirez

When it comes to having a developed food scene, Houston is lagging behind Austin, at least according to a new study. Wallethub released its rankings of the best food cities in America on Tuesday, scoring 182 cities based on their affordability, diversity and quality of food. A total of 16 Texas cities made the list, with both Houston and Austin landing among the top 25 cities. Unfortunately for Houstonians who revel in their rivalry with Texas' capital, Austin placed eight spots higher than Houston. To calculate the rankings, researchers looked at a number of factors, including restaurants per capita, the ratio of fast-food places to full-service restaurants, and even the number of herb and spice stores found in a particular city.

In the end, Houston lagged behind Austin in terms of diversity, quality, and accessibility. Still, experts graded Houston higher than Austin when it came to food affordability, and noted Bayou City had some of the lowest cost of groceries in the nation.

OVERVIEW

After two-year delay and cost overrun of billions of dollars, 55km mega bridge opens

Ceremony with about 700 guests takes place at immigration clearance facilities on an artificial island

China's President Xi Jinping opened the world's longest sea crossing on Tuesday, holding up the new Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macau Bridge as a showpiece of Chinese power, ambition and innovation. The Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macau Bridge, alternatively and officially spelled Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao Bridge, is a bridge-tunnel system consisting of a series of three cable-stayed bridges and one undersea tunnel, as well as two artificial islands. Xi expressed hope that the mega project would facilitate his Greater Bay Area initiative as he officiated at the opening ceremony for the 55km bridge, which opens to public traffic on Wednesday after a two-year delay and a cost overrun of billions of dollars.

Hong Kong's leader, Chief Executive Carrie Lam Cheng Yuet-ngor, was among the 700 guests who attended the launch, held at the immigration clearance facilities on the mainland Chinese side of an artificial island in Zhuhai, Guangdong province. Lam entered the venue side-by-side with Xi, smiling and chatting with the president while her Macau counterpart, Fernando Chui Sai-on, followed together with Vice-Premier Han Zheng.

Lam's entrance raised eyebrows among those who saw it as a departure from protocol for her to walk in front of top mainland officials, but she later advised the media not to read too much into it. She suggested it had more to do with chivalry as she was the only woman among the officiating guests.

Among those with front-row seats at the ceremony were: Vice-Premier Liu He, Xi's point man on economic policy; Ding Xuexiang, a trusted aide; Guangdong party boss Li Xi; former Hong Kong leaders Leung Chun-ying and Tung Chee-hwa; and Macau's chief executive.

The mega bridge, which puts the three cities it links within an hour's drive of one another, is slated to further integrate the two special administrative regions with southern China and boost business, but critics have called it a "white elephant", doubting if it was worth the HK$120 billion (US$15.4 billion) Hong Kong invested in it.

While Xi did not make a speech at the 30-minute ceremony, except to declare the opening of the bridge, the official Xinhua news agency quoted him as saying it demonstrated China's fighting spirit. The mega project also reflected China's power and ambition, as well as innovation, Xi was quoted as saying at the event, which marked his first trip to Guangdong since 2012, when he visited the province soon after coming to power.

Upon returning to Hong Kong, Lam said

Following the opening ceremony, President Xi was taken on a tour of the bridge with a select group of guests.

He described the project as a bridge of "fulfilled dreams", "connected hearts", "confidence" and "rejuvenation".

A structure of such scale needed to be built and maintained well, Xi added, so that it would help with the Greater Bay Area project to develop a technology-led economic hub comprising Hong Kong, Macau and nine mainland Chinese cities. After the ceremony, Xi was taken on a tour of the bridge with a select group of guests. They met with the builders and told them they should be proud of what they had accomplished.

Upon returning to Hong Kong, Lam said

Xi was concerned about the city's readiness to get on board the Greater Bay Area initiative, and had asked about the local airport's capacity to handle a heavier load as a result of greater integration. (Courtesy <https://www.scmp.com/news>)

World's longest sea crossing: Hong Kong-Zhuhai bridge opens

Including its access roads, the bridge spans 55km (34 miles) and connects Hong Kong to Macau and the mainland Chinese city of Zhuhai.

The bridge cost about $20bn (£15.3bn) and should have opened in 2016.

Construction has been dogged by safety issues - at least 18 workers have died on the project, officials say.

Limited bus services begin on Wednesday.

What's so special about this bridge?

Designed to withstand earthquakes and typhoons, it was built using 400,000 tonnes of steel, enough to build 60 Eiffel Towers. About 30km of its total length crosses the sea of the Pearl River delta. To allow ships through, a 6.7km section in the middle dips into an undersea tunnel that runs between two artificial islands.

The remaining sections are link roads, viaducts and land tunnels connecting Zhuhai and Hong Kong to the main bridge.

One of two artificial islands that have been built as part of the multi-billion-dollar project

Why has it been built?

It is part of China's plan to create a Greater Bay Area, including Hong Kong, Macau and nine other cities in southern China. The area is currently home to 68 million people.

In the past, travelling between Zhuhai and Hong Kong would take up to four hours - the new bridge cuts this down to 30 minutes.

Bridges and tunnel between border crossing areas

Can anyone drive across the bridge?

No. Those who want to cross the bridge must obtain special permits, allocated by a quota system. And all vehicles will pay a toll.

The bridge is not served by public transport, so private shuttle buses will ply the route. There is no rail link.

Authorities initially estimated that 9,200 vehicles would cross the bridge every day. They later lowered their estimations after new transport networks were built in the region.

What are people saying about it?

There's been a great deal of criticism of the project.

It has been dubbed the "bridge of death" by some local media. At least nine workers on the Hong Kong side have died and officials told BBC News Chinese that nine had died on the mainland side, too.

Hundreds of workers have also been injured during the construction. (Courtesy <https://www.bbc.com/news>)
