Trump Threatens to Totally Destroy North Korea

U.S. President Trump addresses the 72nd United Nations General Assembly at U.N. headquarters in New York

REUTERS

U.S. President Donald Trump escalated his standoff with North Korea over its nuclear challenge on Tuesday, threatening to “totally destroy” the country of 26 million people and mocking its leader, Kim Jong Un, as a “rocket man.”

In a hard-edged speech to the United Nations General Assembly, Trump offered a grim portrait of a world in peril, adopted a more confrontational approach to solving global challenges from Iran to Venezuela, and gave an unabashed defense of U.S. sovereignty.

“The United States has great strength and patience, but if it is forced to defend itself or its allies, we will have no choice but to totally destroy North Korea,” Trump told the 193-member world body, sticking closely to a script. (here)

As loud, startled murmurs filled the hall, Trump described Kim in an acid tone, saying, “Rocket man is on a suicide mission for himself and his regime.”

His remarks rattled world leaders gathered in the green-marbled U.N. General Assembly hall, where minutes earlier U.N. Secretary-General Antonio Guterres appealed for statesmanship, saying: “We must not sleep-walk our way into war.”

Trump’s most direct military threat to attack North Korea, in his debut appearance at the General Assembly, was his latest expression of concern about Pyongyang’s repeated launching of ballistic missiles over Japan and underground nuclear tests.

His advisers say he is concerned about North Korea’s advances in missile technology and the few means available for a peaceful response without China’s help.

Inside the hall, one man in the audience covered his face with his hands shortly after Trump made his “totally destroy” comment. Swedish Foreign Minister Margot Wallstrom crossed her arms.

North Korea's Ambassador to the U.N. Ja Song Nam leaves his seat

“It was the wrong speech, at the wrong time, to the wrong audience,” Wallstrom later told the BBC.

Trump did not back down, instead later tweeting out the line in his speech vowing to destroy North Korea if needed.

Recent rains set yearly record for IAH measuring

By Keri Blakinger

With the rains came the worry. Just weeks after Hurricane Harvey thrashed the Houston area, a new round of rain Monday snarled traffic, sparked concerns and set off flash flood warnings.

By the time the downpour dissipated around 9 p.m., the Houston area saw a new rainfall record for the year - sort of.

The 0.42 inches that pelted George Bush Intercontinental Airport topped the site’s previous record, set in 2001 after Tropical Storm Allison devastated the region.

But it’s still not the Bayou City’s all-time high - though that’s not far off.

Houston nightclub shuts down after 15 years

HOUSTON – TDRINK Houston, the well-known nightclub and bar in the Marq E Entertainment Center, is closing its doors.

The business announced it was shutting down on its Facebook page on 3 p.m. Monday, citing Hurricane Harvey and the city’s resulting curfew as the main culprits.

“Since reopening after the hurricane, our sales have decreased significantly and we have not been able to catch up from our losses,” the group said in a statement. Officials are asking for patience during their growing pains.

President Trump announced Foxconn is opening a new factory in Wisconsin, a $10 billion investment for the company. On Monday, Gov. Scott Walker approved $3 billion in incentives for the Taiwanese electronics manufacturer to build a new plant in the state. The hefty gift, which was first announced in July, was hotly debated by state legislators before they gave their approval last week.

“We are honored Foxconn chose Wisconsin, and I’m grateful to [Foxconn CEO] Terry Gou and the members of both parties in the Legislature for all they have done to make this historic event a reality,” Walker, a Republican, said in a statement. Foxconn has pledged to invest $10 billion to build a factory that makes LCD screens. The facility is expected to create between 3,000 and 13,000 new jobs and should be up and running by 2020. The deal has been touted by President

Wisconsin’s Foxconn Deal Is A “Go....” Huge “Game Changer For Region” It’s Official: Gov. Scott Walker Approves $3 Billion In Incentives For New Foxconn Plant In Wisconsin

Donald Trump, who has referred to Gou as “one of the great businessmen anywhere in the world.” But in Wisconsin, the agreement’s price tag has made it controversial. The annual payout to Foxconn will be between $200 million and $250 million, according to the Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation. That means the state will pay between $15,000 and $19,000 dollars per job per year, assuming 13,000 positions are actually created. The incentives include up to $1.5 billion in state income tax credits for job creation, up to $1.35 billion in state income tax credits for capital investment and up to $150 million for the sales and use tax exemption, according to the development agency.

Radio Commentator Personality Rush Limbaugh Comments On The Foxconn Deal

“Foxconn, have you seen the details of that? I mean, it’s amazing what’s gonna happen in southeastern Wisconsin. Foxconn manufactures the iPhone for the most part. There are three different manufacturers that assemble the iPhone. Foxconn, Hon Hai Precision company does the majority. Pegatron and Wistron are the other two that assemble the iPhone. “You ever stop to think how many iPhones Apple has to make a day to sell 80 million in a quarter? They’ve run the numbers down to the number of iPhones per second that have to roll off the assembly line, and it’s like 800,000 iPhones a second, if they’re gonna make enough of them to sell 80 million in a quarter. It’s astounding, the numbers are astounding. “They’re gonna make LCD displays at Foxconn in Wisconsin, not iPhones. The LCD displays will be for computers, TV sets, dashboard in your car displays. That’s what they’re gonna make. “

The typical deal would be closer to $2,400 per job per year, according to Timothy Bartik, an economist at the W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research. “[Foxconn is] looking to automate. They’re looking to make money. Let’s not get lost in the excitement of it,” state Sen. Chris Larson, a Democrat, told fellow lawmakers last week.

iPhone-maker Foxconn to open Wisconsin plant expected to create as many as 13,000 jobs - Chicago Tribune

Ultimately, the Republican-controlled legislature gave its okay. The deal even garnered support from some Democrats. “Today Wisconsin is officially saying yes to a $10 billion development project, 13,000 careers and new opportunities throughout Wisconsin,” Robin Vos, the state Assembly’s top Republican, said in a press release. “This law allows the state to move forward on the largest economic development project in state history.” (Courtesy: http://money.cnn.com/2017/09/18/)

Foxconn’s American Dream: Wisconsin Shells Out $3 Billion To Hon Hai Precision Industry

Hon Hai Precision Industry, better known through its subsidiary Foxconn, is the world’s largest contract electronics manufacturer and the third-largest information technology company by revenue. Since the iPhone was introduced in 2007, Foxconn Technology has become a virtual household name as one of Apple’s main suppliers. After last year’s acquisition of Sharp, Hon Hai has now set its sights on Toshiba’s lucrative memory-chip business, with Apple and Amazon to inject funds. Hon Hai also plans to invest up to $10 billion in the U.S. starting with a large LCD plant in Wisconsin, with Wisconsin Governor Walker offering $3 billion in commitments.

Michigan Governor Snyder on Thursday: “You have to ask what price is Wisconsin paying to get them to come there?”, adding: “I don’t believe in buying companies into our states.”

Workers at a Foxconn plant in China assemble orders.

Terry Gou, founder and CEO of Taiwan’s largest company Hon Hai Precision Industry (OTCPK:HNHAF) (OTCPK:HNHAY), better known as Apple (NASDAQ:AAPL) supplier Foxconn Technology Group (OTC:FXCOF), is full of ambition and ready to move up the value chain.

After last year’s decision to acquire Japanese electronics manufacturer Sharp (OTCPK:SHCAY), which makes display panels for iPads and iPhones, Hon Hai has now set its sights on Toshiba’s (OTCPK:-TOSBF) lucrative memory-chip business. According to Gou, both Apple and Amazon (NASDAQ:AMZN) will be injecting funds into the deal.

And this week POTUS took to Twitter with the following news: “Thank you Foxconn, for investing $10 BILLION DOLLARS with the potential for up to 13K new jobs in Wisconsin! MadeInTheUSA”, tweeted President Trump after the company announced a new plant to make display panels.

This single event perhaps highlights Hon Hai’s impressive ability throughout its 43-year history to plan ahead and adapt, and thereby continue its stellar growth path despite an ever-changing global business environment. This key trait of Gou has ultimately made Hon Hai Precision Industry what it is today, the world’s largest contract electronics manufacturer and the third-largest information technology company by revenue. No One's Buying Tickets To The 2018 Winter Olympics

NBC's coverage of the 2018 Winter Olympics will be live in all time zones. (Photo/Getty Images)

Olympic tickets usually sell pretty quickly, but when the country on your northern border makes regular threats about launching nuclear weapons, that can have a chilling effect on sales.

South Korea's learning that lesson, as domestic ticket sales for the PyeongChang games, which start in roughly five months, have been incredibly slow. Of the 750,000 seats organizers hope to sell to South Koreans, just 52,000 have been sold so far.

International sales have been a bit better, with half of the 320,000 allocated tickets sold.

It's a big difference from the 1988 Seoul games, when demand was incredibly strong. But times are a lot different – and the country has less to prove, as it's already a big player in the technology industry.

Lee Hee-beom, president of PyeongChang's organizing committee, says he doesn't expect North Korea to cause problems during the games, since it is expected to have athletes participating. But even though PyeongChang is a ski town, neither North nor South Korea are known for their winter sport athletes, which could also be a factor in the poor sales.

Organizers downplay the softness, saying

PyeongChang tickets are selling at a faster pace than the 2014 Sochi games were at this point.

In Latest test, North Korea detonates its most powerful nuclear device yet

North Korea sharply raised the stakes one week ago last Sunday in its standoff with the rest of the world, detonating a powerful nuclear device that it claimed was a hydrogen bomb that could be attached to a missile capable of reaching the mainland United States.

Even if Kim Jong Un's regime is exaggerating its feats, scientific evidence showed that North Korea had crossed an important threshold and had detonated a nuclear device that was vastly more powerful than its last – and almost seven times the size of the bomb that destroyed Hiroshima.

Tensions had already been running high, with Kim repeatedly defying international condemnation and increasingly blunt warnings by President Trump, and continuing to launch ballistic missiles.

This undated image distributed on Sunday, Sept. 3, 2017, by the North Korean government, shows North Korean leader Kim Jong Un at an undisclosed location. North Korea's state media on Sunday, Sept. 3, 2017, said leader Kim Jong Un inspected the loading of a hydrogen bomb into a new intercontinental ballistic missile, a claim to technological mastery that some outside experts will doubt but that will raise already high worries on the Korean Peninsula.

But Sunday's blast — North Korea's sixth nuclear test but the first since Trump took office — could escalate those tensions to a new level.

Trump sharply condemned the test, saying North Korea is "very hostile and dangerous to the United States."

In a pair of tweets issued Sunday morning, Trump wrote: "North Korea has conducted a major Nuclear Test. Their words and actions continue to be very hostile and dangerous to the United States ... North Korea is a rogue nation which has become a great threat and embarrassment to China, which is trying to help but with little success."

Trump also delivered an admonishment of sorts to South Korea, saying that "appeasement with North Korea will not work" and suggesting that more severe steps must be taken to influence Kim's regime.

China said Sunday that it "resolutely opposes and strongly condemns" the launch, adding to denunciations from South Korea and Japan.

The nuclear device that North Korea tested appeared to be so large that Vipin Narang, an expert on nuclear proliferation and strategy at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, called it a "city buster." (Courtesy <https://www.washingtonpost.com/world/>)

Thousands file travel insurance claims during this year's busy hurricane season

By Andrea Rumbaugh

The vacation is booked and one nagging question remains. Should we get travel insurance? Thousands are relieved they opted for the extra expense during this year's active hurricane season.

"Hurricane Irma has caused thousands of our customers to cancel their trips to Florida," Daniel Durazo, director of communications at Allianz Global Assistance USA, said in a statement.

As of Friday, Allianz Travel Insurance received almost 7,000 claims, and the insurer reports that its customer service center has fielded more than 1,200 calls from customers seeking support following Hurricane Irma.

Allianz has also received more than 2,800 claims related to Hurricane Harvey and a handful of claims for Hurricane Jose.

Durazo said those affected by Irma should contact airlines and hotels before canceling a trip. Many are allowing customers to reschedule without additional fees. State Farm customers throughout Texas had filed 35,200 auto claims and 41,400 property claims related to Harvey. The Texas Windstorm Insurance Association, the insurer of last resort for wind and hail coverage along the coast, reported 59,368 claims as of Friday. The Texas FAIR Plan Association, which provides residential property insurance in underserved areas, reported 13,874 claims

12 tips for renovating your kitchen

Getting your home back in order after storm and flood damage will have many Houston-area residents facing the prospect of putting in new kitchens.

By Diane Cowen

Those who hire contractors and interior designers will get their professional advice, but those on more limited budgets will make decisions on their own - some driven by wants, others driven by needs. Pinterest and Houzz websites are full of great ideas and are great places to begin your planning. Save photos of the kitchens you love to either of these sites, then assess the common threads. It will help you determine your style.

Here's a list of current trends in kitchen design, from Missy Stewart Designs:

1. Cabinets: Nothing dates your kitchen faster than out-of-style cabinets. Modern cabinets inherently come in a sleek, flat style. If you opt for transitional or contemporary styles, look at flat-panel or Shaker-style cabinet doors.

While you can't go wrong with white paint, you also should consider gray paint or a dark espresso stain.

2. Counters: Our countertop vocabulary used to include laminate, marble and granite. Now, consider porcelain. It's more durable than granite or marble, and won't stain or nick. Big sheets of it can wrap an island and can be placed as perimeter counters, just as marble would. Look for veiny gray-white styles that mimic Carrara or Calacatta marble. You can use this same porcelain for your backsplash, in a smaller tile.

3. Island: The island does not have to match your perimeter cabinets or counters. If you have white cabinets, a splash of color could work on the island. Right now, Stewart loves navy. Homeowners also should think about their favorite colors - and what would blend with rooms visible from the kitchen. If your budget allows, consider installing a microwave drawer or refrigerated drawer in your island.

4. Flooring: Rule No. 1 - square is out when it comes to tile flooring, Stewart says. For a bigger kitchen, go with a 24 x 32 format. For a smaller kitchen, use planklike tile that's 8 inches wide by 36 inches long. When you're shopping, look for "rectified" tile - the edges are a sharp 90 degrees - which allows it to be set with a super-thin grout line. Let your installer know that you want tight, almost non-existent grout lines; most will use the wider grooves by default.

5. Lighting: This could be one of your most important decisions. You'll want a combination of recessed lighting and ceiling fixtures. Consider one large hanging fixture or a group of pendants for over an island - and pick something with personality. If your kitchen is stripped to the studs, consider where you have/want electrical outlets. Think about tucking them underneath cabinets so they don't show on the walls.

6. Plumbing: Stewart recommends Delta's Touch2O Technology for faucets. If your hands are full or messy, all you have to do is tap the faucet with your arm or wrist, and the water comes on. (Motion-sensor options may not work as well as you think; they'll come on any time you're near whether you really want the water or not.)

7. Hardware: For cabinet knobs and pulls, satin brass is in. It looks great in a modern kitchen, especially combined with dark cabinets. Mixed metals are another option, combining gold/brass with silver/nickel.

8. Minimalism: If your post-storm mantra is "less is more," apply that minimalist philosophy to your kitchen. Don't keep small appliances out on the counter; they just add to visual clutter. Another option is to use floating shelves instead of upper cabinets. It will save money and look like a contemporary update. Just don't pile too much on them. Nice glass, pretty dishes and serving pieces should create an attractive display.

9. Appliances: Even if you can't afford high-end appliances such as Gaggenau, Thermador or Wolf, you can take cues from all they have to offer. If you have room for a double oven, get one with an oven warmer or steam option - you'll wonder how you ever lived without it.

When buying a refrigerator, get one with plenty of pull-out drawers for fresh produce. If you like to entertain, consider using some under-the-counter space for a wine/beverage refrigerator.

10. Window treatments: Roller shades with or without valances give you privacy while allowing diffused light in. Hang the valance so that it covers the base of the roller shade, but not so low that it eats up a lot of window space. "Those arched roman valances over windows are long gone," Stewart says of '80s-style window treatments. "Today they're very linear."

11. Kitchen tech: Create a hidden charging station in a kitchen drawer. Have the electrical wiring installed in the back of the drawer and tuck away phones and iPads while they're charging. This will help eliminate clutter.

12. TV: Do you really want or need a TV in your kitchen? Your kitchen is likely the heart of your home, where family and friends gather. Are they really there to watch TV?
