Ex-USA Gymnastics doctor gets up to 175 years as abuse victims

LANSING, Mich. (Reuters) - As his victims wept in a Michigan courtroom on Wednesday, disgraced long-time USA Gymnastics team doctor Larry Nassar was sentenced to up to 175 years in prison for abusing young female gymnasts who were entrusted to his care. "I've signed your death warrant," Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Rosemarie Aquilina told Nassar, following days of accounts from about 160 of his victims. Spectators and victims cried, applauded and embraced as Nassar, 54, wearing a dark blue jailhouse jumpsuit, was led out of the courtroom. Rachael Denhollander, the first woman to publicly accuse him in 2016, shared a hug with Angela Povilaitis, the lead prosecutor. Nassar, who served as the program's physician through four Olympic Games, apologized to his victims during the hearing, telling them, "I will carry your words with me for the rest of my days." Aquilina dismissed his statement as insincere and courtroom spectators gasped as the judge read aloud from a letter he wrote to her claiming he was a good doctor who was manipulated into pleading guilty. Nassar, who already is serving a 60-year sentence in federal prison for child pornography convictions, also said his accusers fabricated claims to gain money and fame, writing, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." "Would you like to withdraw your plea?" Aquilina asked Nassar after tossing aside his letter. "No, your honor," Nassar said.

"Because you are guilty, aren't you? Are you guilty, sir?" the judge demanded. After a long pause, Nassar said quietly, "I have said my plea, exactly." The prosecution and Aquilina emphasized the broader significance of the sentencing, coming amid a national debate over sexual misconduct prompted by accusations against powerful men from Hollywood to Washington. "At this particular moment in history, this sentence and hearing will be viewed as a turning point in how our community, our state, our nation, our culture looks at sexual abuse," Povilaitis said. Aquilina rattled off a series of statistics about the prevalence of sexual abuse before saying, "It stops now." The sentencing followed an extraordinary week long hearing that saw Nassar's victims unflinchingly, defiantly, tell their stories in raw terms. Despite Nassar's objections, Aquilina allowed victims who were not part of his guilty plea to speak at his sentencing. Throughout much of the proceedings, the bespectacled Nassar sat with his head bowed, rarely making eye contact with his accusers. The women ranged from famous Olympic gold medalists like Aly Raisman to former gymnasts like Denhollander, now a lawyer, who was the last of the victims to speak on Wednesday and whom Aquilina described as "the bravest person I have ever had in my courtroom." McKayla Maroney, a gold medalist at the 2012 London Olympics, called Nassar a "monster human being," while a former member of the U.S. national team said his abuse led to depression and an eating disorder. Another gymnast said she was only 6 years old when Nassar began molesting her and blamed the doctor for her father's suicide once he realized she had not been lying about the abuse she endured. "I've been forever changed by all of this and I will never feel small again," Bailey Lorenzen said after the sentencing. She had been an anonymous accuser until she spoke in court this week. "I have a different confidence in myself as a woman." In addition to Raisman and Maroney, Olympic gold medalists Simone Biles, Jordyn Wieber and Gabby Douglas went public in recent months with their own accusations against Nassar. The scandal's impact is far from over, with prominent gymnasts castigating USA Gymnastics for its handling of the scandal and the president of Michigan State University, where Nassar also worked, coming under pressure to resign.

North Korea sends rare announcement to all Koreans, calls for unification

SEOUL (Reuters) - North Korea sent a rare announcement addressed to "all Koreans at home and abroad" on Thursday, saying they should make a "breakthrough" for unification without the help of other countries, its state media said.

It said all Koreans should "promote contact, travel, cooperation between North and South Korea" while adding Pyongyang will "smash" all challenges against reunification of the Korean peninsula. The announcement, issued after a joint meeting of government and political parties, added Koreans should wage an energetic drive to defuse the acute military tension and create a peaceful climate on the Korean peninsula. Military tension on the Korean peninsula was a "fundamental obstacle" for the improvement of inter-Korean relations and unification, the North's official news agency said. It added joint military drills with "outside forces" has shown to be unhelpful for the development of relations between North and South Korea. North Korea did not provide details why the meeting had been held but the statement said it was aimed to support leader Kim Jong Un's remarks regarding unification from his New Year's address. It said this year is meaningful for both North and South Korea as it is the 70th anniversary of the founding of North Korea while South Korea will be hosting the Winter Olympics next month.

Toys R Us is planning to shutter roughly 180 stores across the country, or about one-fifth of its U.S. store fleet, in a bid to restructure the company and emerge from bankruptcy protection.

The closures still need court approval, documents show, but management is planning to shut those locations beginning in early February and running through mid-April. (See below for a complete list of those locations set to close.)

“The reinvention of our brands requires that we make tough decisions about our priorities and focus,” Chairman and Chief Executive Officer David Brandon wrote Tuesday in a memo to customers. “The actions we are taking are necessary to give us the best chance to emerge from our bankruptcy proceedings as a more viable and competitive company.”

The Wayne, New Jersey-based retailer added that a number of its existing locations will be co-branded as Toys R Us and Babies R Us stores.

Just four months ago and prior to the holiday shopping season, Toys R Us filed for bankruptcy protection as its sales were waning and debt was piling up. The toy chain faces increased competition from the likes of Amazon, Walmart, and Target, and it’s struggled meeting consumers’ needs online.

‘Store Closing’ sign is posted in a Toys R Us store.

Toys R Us has said it’s focused on improving the in-store and online shopping experience and is also planning to revamp its loyalty program to appeal to more consumers.

Toys R Us’ Canadian president, Melanie Teed-Murch, said in a separate memo that the 83 locations in Canada won’t be impacted by Tuesday’s news.

In Canada, Toys R Us “will be taking additional steps to improve the overall customer omnichannel experience with compelling promotions, continued improvements to mobile and digital marketing and enhancements to our baby registry and loyalty programs,” Teed-Murch explained.

One analyst has already speculated Target is positioned to be the biggest winner as Toys R Us closes some of its U.S. stores, considering the big-box retailer’s proximity to the toy chain’s locations.

Out of Toys R Us’ roughly 880 store fleet in the U.S., 183 stores (including those under the Babies R Us nameplate) have at least one other Toys R Us store within a 15-minute drive, UBS wrote in a note to clients in December. Analyst Michael Lasser said he believed the company would close these “cannibalized” locations before any others.

Former Toys R Us CEO Jerry Storch said the toy retailer will likely take on a different form as it fights off e-commerce competition.

Even during the holidays, former Toys R Us CEO Jerry Storch couldn’t deny that toys are “a very tough business.”

“It got a lot worse when Amazon got in,” Storch, also founder and CEO of Storch Advisors, told CNBC’s “Closing Bell.”

Toys R Us ‘will survive in a different form as online competition grows, former CEO says

The rise of e-commerce has effectively dovetailed one of the toy business’ top moneymaking strategies, Storch said: raising the price of a small number of red-hot products at the right time.

“The internet’s a perfect vehicle for trashing the margins on those products,” Storch said, adding that Toys R Us’ baby business is also struggling against competitive pressures.

“I’m sure, though, that Toys R Us will survive in some form” as e-commerce giants such as Amazon and Walmart take market share in the toy space, the CEO said. “Toys R Us will survive in a different form.”

The key to surviving? Storch, the former CEO of Canadian retailer Hudson’s Bay, cast it as a balance between scale and investment.

“It’s going to take tremendous investment on the internet and in stores to be a retailer in the future,” he said, naming Amazon and Walmart the anointed winners of this holiday season.

And while some retailers, such as DIY giants Home Depot and Lowe’s and off-price favorites TJX and Burlington Stores, will continue to do well no matter what, others will need to sacrifice, Storch said.

“There’s going to be significant consolidation ahead; there’s going to be more store closings,” the CEO predicted. “Those that are best capitalized are the ones that are going to survive.”

Early History Of Toys R Us

Toys “R” Us, Inc. is an American toy and juvenile-products retailer founded in 1948 and headquartered in Wayne, New Jersey, in the New York City metropolitan area. Founded by Charles P. Lazarus in its modern incarnation in 1957, Toys “R” Us traces its origins to Lazarus’ children’s furniture store, which he started in 1948. He added toys to his offering, and eventually shifted his focus. The company has been in the toy business for more than 65 years and operates around 800 stores in the United States and around 800 globally. Toys “R” Us experienced expansion as a chain, becoming predominant in its niche field of toy retail. Represented by cartoon mascot Geoffrey the Giraffe from 1969, Toys “R” Us eventually branched out into launching the stores Babies “R” Us and the now-defunct Kids “R” Us.

The company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in the U.S. on September 18, 2017, and has also filed for bankruptcy protection in Canada (see Companies’ Creditors Arrangement Act). They have stated their stores will continue to operate. Operations in Europe and Australia, licensed stores and joint venture partnership in Asia, which are separate entities, are not part of the Chapter 11 filing. U.S. oil companies, most with headquarters or significant operations in Houston, have more than $150 billion in foreign earnings...

It remains unclear how much the oil companies might bring back home and what they might do with it. But sweeping changes in the corporate tax system have provided incentives for companies to bring overseas earnings...

Under the previous tax law, U.S. companies could avoid paying taxes on foreign earnings by keeping it abroad. The new system imposes taxes on foreign earnings, but U.S. companies are allowed a one-time tax of 15.5 percent for repatriated cash...

U.S. firms, including Apple and JPMorgan Chase & Co., recently announced they'll make big investments in domestic operations while making multibillion-dollar tax payment bills to repatriate cash. If oil companies followed the lead of Apple and JPMorgan...

"The rule of thumb is you're not really going to do a sophisticated drilling job without turning to Houston," said Bill Gilmer, director of the Institute for Regional Forecasting at the University of Houston. "If it's spent abroad or spent here, a good share of it would wind up here in the Houston area."

Exxon Mobil has a major campus near The Woodlands. The company says its legal efforts would back potential claims of the "abuse of process" by California officials.

Gilmer noted the $150 billion that oil companies hold in foreign earnings, which could include cash and the value of assets, is almost equivalent to the $175 billion in capital expenditures by the nation's oil producers, refiners and pipeline operators last year.

Exxon Mobil Corp. and Chevron Corp.,

the two largest U.S. oil companies, together had more than $100 billion in foreign earnings at the end of 2016, according to the most recent regulatory filings data compiled by financial research firm Audit Analytics.

Exxon Mobil had $54 billion in foreign earnings last year, the 10th largest among U.S. companies. Chevron had the 13th largest sum, with $46.4 billion.

Large oil producers, including Houston's Occidental Petroleum Corp. and ConocoPhillips, had almost $24 billion in overseas earnings combined. Major U.S. oil refiners Valero Energy Corp., based in San Antonio, and Phillips 66, based in Houston, together had $6.9 billion in overseas earnings.

Oil field service companies, equipment suppliers and rig contractors, including Houston-based National Oilwell Varco, Baker Hughes and Halliburton, had more than $24 billion in foreign earnings.

Exxon and Phillips 66 declined comment. Most of the companies did not immediately respond to requests for comment on Tuesday.

Halliburton, which reported earnings on Monday, said it recorded an $882 million noncash charge as a preliminary provision for "the net impact of tax reform." Exxon Mobil and Chevron will report fourth-quarter 2017 earnings on Feb. 2.

Lawmakers hoped the new tax law would create an incentive for U.S. companies to reinvest their overseas cash in domestic operations and boost U.S. economic growth. Apple, with more than $250 billion in overseas cash, last week announced it plans to build a new campus and invest some $30 billion in the United States, absorbing a $38 billion tax bill on its repatriated cash.

JPMorgan Chase & Co. on Tuesday said it plans to raise wages for 22,000 employees to as much as $18 an hour, open 400 new branches across the country and hire 4,000 new workers in a $20 billion investment plan over the next five years.

But some economists are skeptical that the repatriated cash will significantly bolster the U.S. economy. In an October report, macroeconomic research firm Capital Economics said the new tax law would end companies' "ability to defer payments by keeping earnings abroad," but most of the repatriated cash would likely be returned to shareholders, who would tend to save the money.

"This would be unlikely to provide a major boost to investment or hiring," Capital Economics said. "Many firms already have large reserves of domestic cash, with the liquid assets of the overall non-financial corporate sector close to a record high as a share of GDP."
