Biden's new goal: 70% of U.S. adults to get one vaccine dose by July 4

President Joe Biden on Tuesday announced a goal to have 70% of U.S. adults vaccinated with at least one COVID-19 shot by the July 4 Independence Day holiday, and urged young people in their 20s and 30s in particular to get inoculated.

The president, who has made fighting the coronavirus a key priority of his administration, had previously announced July 4 as a target date for when Americans can gather in small groups to signal a return to greater normalcy in the middle of the pandemic.

Biden's new goal comes as the administration faces increasing, though not unexpected, challenges of getting shots into the arms of people who are hesitant about the vaccine. The new target takes that reality into account.

"Now that we have the vaccine supply, we're focused on convincing even more Americans to show up and get the vaccine that is available to them," Biden told reporters at the White House while announcing his target. "If we succeed in this effort ... then Americans will have taken a serious step towards a return to normal."

Biden's new goal includes having 160 million adults fully vaccinated by the Fourth of July.

An administration official told reporters that at this time 105 million Americans are fully vaccinated and more than 56% of U.S. adults, or 147 million people, have received at least one shot. (Graphic on global vaccines)

"There are a lot of younger people, especially those in their 20s and 30s who believe they don't need it. Well, I want to be absolutely clear: You do need to get vaccinated," Biden said.

The president's goal would result in roughly half of the entire U.S. population being vaccinated by early July.

U.S. officials are gearing up to administer vaccines to adolescents once approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

To meet the president's target, the government will work to make the vaccine even more accessible by having thousands of pharmacies allow walk-in appointments and using the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) "to support more pop-up clinics," the White House said in a statement.

Pandemic-led decline of U.S. cities may be reversing

Fears that U.S. cities would be emptied by the coronavirus pandemic are giving way to potential signs of revival, according to a series of analyses that suggest any dislocation from the last year will prove temporary.

Some data suggest a return is already underway. Cellphone tracking firm Unacast had earlier noted that phone users were shifting their overnight locations out of New York, but now sees them coming back.

"New York is growing again," with the city adding a net 1,900 people in the first two months of 2021 versus a loss of 7,100 in the same two months of 2019 and the 110,000 estimated by the company to have left the city throughout 2020.

The turn may have begun last fall, when the usual seasonal jump in population centered around the arrival of college students roughly matched that of 2019, fewer people left the city than the year before, and "there was a large influx from areas surrounding the city, perhaps the return of some who left ... at the height of the pandemic," the company wrote in a new research report.

Manhattan and the Bronx "demonstrate particular resilience," gaining 21,000 residents over the first two months of 2021. Three of New York City's five counties surveyed by the company lost population, though one, Kings County, saw the pace of loss ease compared to before the pandemic.

Similarly, Bank of America economists wrote last week that they "don't see evidence of a broad urban exodus," a conclusion that combined analysis of the company's own card spending data as well as a survey of other reports.

Expensive markets like New York City and San Francisco saw an already established trend of population loss accelerate, Bank of America analysts wrote. But they noted that people tended not to move far. And with home sales and rental prices having dropped in those locations, the large numbers of younger people who stayed with parents during the pandemic may now be ready to get places of their own.

"We believe both have the potential for some recovery in the near term. NYC and SF remain premier cities for young renters," the bank's analysts wrote. "With the share of young adults living at home reaching record highs in 2020, there could be some pent-up demand."

Those and other analyses downplaying any big shift in migration patterns due to the pandemic are just one indication that the long-term economic consequences of the past year may not be as deep as feared.

A Turning Point

We seem to have arrived at a fork in the pandemic: Pockets of the rich world are beginning to move past COVID-19, while some less-fortunate countries are facing greater danger than ever.

The World Health Organization said this week that more cases had been recorded globally over the last two weeks than in the first six months of the pandemic, driven largely by an unprecedented surge in India and the ongoing onslaught in Brazil. India is now recording around 3,500 deaths per day, and the true rate could be two to five times that many, according to University of Michigan epidemiologist Bhramar Mukherjee.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government has been accused of failing to prepare for a second wave while prioritizing a contentious regional election — which the ruling party lost — even as the wave was crashing down. It's now resisting calls for new national restrictions, though several states have already locked down.

Countries around the world continue to promise oxygen and other supplies. In the meantime, reports continue to emerge of hospitals in New Delhi and elsewhere running out.

In Europe, a fourth wave has begun to subside. Governments hope it's the last one they'll face, and they're preparing for life after the pandemic.

Chancellor Angela Merkel's government is planning to lift restrictions in the coming days for individuals who have been vaccinated.

That could lead temporarily to a two-tiered society within Germany, with the mainly older people who've been vaccinated no longer subject to curfews and other measures.

The state of play: 28% of Germans have now had at least one dose, up from 12% one month ago as the EU continues to shake off its sluggish start to the vaccine rollout.

In the U.S., where 45% of the population has been vaccinated, demand is now a bigger issue than supply.

Cases and deaths both continue to fall, leading to hopes that the U.S. could now be on a trajectory similar to Israel's, where just 13 new cases were recorded on Saturday at a test positivity rate of 0.1%. In India, meanwhile, 9% of the population has had one dose. There will be a shortage of supply at least until July, Serum Institute of India CEO Adar Poonawalla told the FT.

Australia today made it a criminal offense for its citizens to return from India. A number of other countries have banned all travel from India but exempted their own citizens.

Meanwhile, the European Commission today proposed a plan to ease travel restrictions for tourists who have been fully vaccinated.

The recommendation could be adopted by the European Union's 27 member states as early as May 5, paving the way for the return of summer travel to one of the world's most popular tourism destinations, Axios' Zach Basu writes.

The bottom line: The world is opening up to those with access to vaccines. But that doesn't mean the pandemic is anywhere near over. (Courtesy axios.com)

Public HealthStudy: Weather Has A Larger Impact On COVID Spread Than Social Distancing

Compiled And Edited By John T. Robbins, Southern Daily Editor

WASHINGTON — A lot of the blame for COVID-19's "second wave" has been pointed at people not following safety guidelines put out by health experts and government officials. A new report however, says don't blame people, blame the weather. Researchers from the University of Nicosia in Cyprus find hot weather and wind have a bigger impact on virus transmission rates than social distancing during a pandemic.

Their study concludes that two outbreaks in one year is a natural phenomenon during a massive outbreak. Temperature, humidity, and wind can help predict when a second wave will peak, which the researchers call "inevitable."

Science isn't using all of the science it should be

Though face masks, travel restrictions, and social distancing guidelines may help slow the number of new infections in the short term, study authors say the lack of climate data included in epidemiological models has left a glaring hole in the plans to defend against COVID. Looking at Paris, New York City, and Rio de Janeiro, scientists discovered they could accurately predict the timing of the second outbreak in each city. Their research suggests two outbreaks per year is a natural weather-dependent phenomenon during any pandemic.

Typical models for predicting the behavior of an epidemic contain only two basic parameters, transmission and recovery rates. Professors Talib Dbouk and Dimitris Drikakis say these rates tend to be treated as constants, but that this is not actually the case. Since temperature, relative humidity, and wind speed all play a significant role, the researchers aimed to modify typical models to account for these climate conditions. They call their new weather-dependent variable the Airborne Infection Rate (AIR) index.

Different hemispheres will have different COVID waves

When applying the AIR index to models of major cities, the team discovered the behavior of the virus in Rio de Janeiro is markedly different from the behavior of COVID in Paris and New York.

Physics of Fluids. (Courtesy https://www.studyfinds.org/) team added. The study authors suggested that people's immune systems may play a role.

The immune system can be influenced by temperature and nutrition, including vitamin D, which plays an important role in immunity. With less sun exposure during the winter, most people don't make enough vitamin D.

"We know the flu is seasonal, and that we get a break during the summer. That gives us a chance to build the flu vaccine for the following fall," Caetano-Anollés said. "When we are still in the midst of a raging pandemic, that break is nonexistent. Perhaps learning how to boost our immune system could help combat the disease as we struggle to catch up with the ever-changing coronavirus." This study was published online Jan. 26 in the journal Evolutionary Bioinformatics. (Courtesy healthday via webmd.com)

Do weather conditions influence the transmission of COVID-19?
Emerging evidence appears to suggest that weather conditions may influence the transmission of COVID-19, with cold and dry conditions appearing to boost the spread. The weather effect is minimal, however, and all estimates are subject to significant biases, reinforcing the need for robust public health measures.

我為什麼放棄雙碩士學位，選擇考CCIE證書 ——快捷培訓 Lanecert 考證實習就業一條龍！

我從沒想過，人生的選擇可以如此戲劇，從文到商，再由商轉工，只是恰好在最合適的時機做出了最正確的選擇。

每年有近四十萬中國留學生懷揣夢想從國內來到美國深造。然而只有不到十分之一的畢業生能留下來繼續工作，而其中，找到滿意工作的，不足百分之一！

背景：UTD 18Fall Business Analytics 研究生，原輔修 Supply Chain Management 專業，預計將於 2020 年秋季畢業。在暑假期間，接觸到快捷培訓 (LaneCert Inc) 培訓學校，在與老師溝通後，理性分析，權衡利弊，決定放棄雙學位，半工半讀狀態下從零開始學習“思科認證網絡專家 (CCIE)”，並在網絡工程師的道路越走越穩。

01，我的故事：放棄 UTD 雙學位，選擇 CCIE。

研一到研二的過渡期間，我會一度迷茫，語言表達比不過本地，編程背景拼不過印度同學，商科就業起薪低又很難拿到身份，在面試數家公司後，我開始糾結是畢業回國還是繼續留美打拼。

相對於國內不穩定的就業環境，高額的生存成本，以及整體偏低的工資水平，美國在就業條件上還是占據優勢，而無論是賺錢還是工作經驗，踏入職場都是必經之路。

雙學位看似輝煌，好像前途無量，但加倍的成本和重複的 stem 優勢，讓我萌生退意，

留學生求職需要專業對口，通才的學習反而分散了我的精力，簡歷在兩方面都不具備競爭力

，技能又明顯的多而不精，同類競爭優勢不明顯，再加上如今政策縮緊，中美兩國關係緊張

，現有的學習規劃和求職道路已經越發不適用與自身條件

02，機會：在可選範圍內選擇最佳的。

機會往往就在身邊，在同校學長的引導下了解到“CCIE 網絡專家”的高薪崗位，並接觸到了距 UTD 10 分鐘車程的 LaneCert 快捷培訓學校，劉校長清晰的教學思路和嚴謹的培訓模式深深吸引了我，而一對一的指導和實戰型的訓練環境，以及豐富又多樣的成功案例更堅定了我學習的信念，實習上崗和就業指導的承諾更是讓我對未來充滿信心。

03，決策：兵貴神速，快刀亂麻。

恰好天時地利人和，我所在的 BA 專業開辟了“Cyber-security data”方向，剛好與“CCIE”的 Track 可以匹配，同時未來“數據中心”的領域也與我預想的職業規劃不謀而合。

另外，考慮到我的家庭並不富裕，校長幫我申請了分期付款。性價比極高的培訓，從時間上為我節省了半年，費用方面更是省下了 20W RMB 的成

本，權衡利弊之下，我選擇把自己的另外一個專業“drop”掉，毅然決然地投入到了 CCIE 的學習當中。

經過半年的學習，我成功進入到網絡行業，目前已然畢業，身份穩定，職業發展明朗，未來的道路光明可期。
